R.I.D.E. Spot Checks

R.I.D.E. (Reduce Impaired Driving Everywhere) spot checks have been an effective enforcement, education and public awareness tool in Ontario since 1977. R.I.D.E. is popular with many police services across Canada, particularly in drinking and driving "hot spots" during the Holiday Season.

Since most drivers will likely approach a R.I.D.E. spot check this season, here are a few tips to help make it as effective and safe as possible for you, other drivers, and the officers involved.

Please keep in mind that most R.I.D.E. programs are conducted in low light / no light conditions and in a cold, wet environment.

- Drive carefully at all times and don't panic when you see the flares, emergency lights and flashing lights. If you're not speeding, tailgating or going too fast for environmental conditions you will have no problem gradually slowing and stopping. If you're being tailgated, consider activating your emergency flashers for a few seconds.
- If convenient, turn on your interior lights as the officer approaches your vehicle. Police officers can work quickly and safely when they get a reassuring look at the interior and the occupants.
- To further assist the police officer, consider placing your hands momentarily in a stationary position near the top of the steering wheel. Having your hands in clear view allows the officer to work quicker by reducing the threat level and making everyone involved more comfortable.
- Simply respond to a few basic questions and you're normally on your way in a few seconds.

CANNABIS REMINDER: Driving impairment by cannabis is just as dangerous as impairment by alcohol, and carries the same penalties. Roadside drug recognition, evidence gathering, court testimony and sentencing is well established. Never use cannabis and drive, don't be a passenger in a car driven by a person who has used cannabis.

IN SUMMARY: Take note that recent legislation allows police to demand a roadside breath sample without traditional signs of impairment, like the smell of alcohol on your breath, slurred speech, or erratic driving. So, the best way to ensure that you'll have no problems during the R.I.D.E. spot check is simply not to drive if you've consumed alcohol or drugs.
